

HS1102 Media Project

Weekly Story Anchor Report

Weeks 1–15 — Complete for every team meeting · Consult the Weekly Discussion Guide before your meeting

Team Name / No.	518	Week No.	1
Session Date	26-08-26	Story Anchor (Name + Roll No.)	Melvin John SE26UCSE098
This Week's Exercise / Milestone	Exercise 1: One-Page translation

Discussion Questions & Team's Responses

Copy the questions for this week from the Discussion Guide. Record the team's answer or key points raised for each.

Question (from this week's Discussion Guide)	Team's Answer / Key Points Raised
Which two or three moments did each member select from the passage, and why were the others excluded?	We discussed the various moments that each member considered essential to telling the story. Most of us felt that Aditya submitting his resignation, returning to his office to pack his belongings, and eventually standing in the rain were the most important moments, as they represented the major emotional shift he experienced during his resignation. Some members also suggested including a silent shot of the office or showing Aditya leaving the building, while others felt these moments were unnecessary and could be understood through the surrounding frames. We ultimately agreed that including every moment would make the sequence feel cluttered, and that the main purpose of the task was to carefully select the most meaningful moments to portray.
How did the team translate the passage's abstract language into specific, concrete images?	We concluded that emotions such as separation, uncertainty, boredom, and hesitation could not be communicated directly and therefore needed to be expressed through visual elements. The quietness of the office was represented through a deserted and static setting, creating a sense of emptiness. The act of placing the resignation letter on the head's desk served as a clear symbol of separation and departure. Similarly, the personal photograph became an important visual element, representing Aditya's emotional connection to the place he was leaving behind. For the final sequence in the rain, we chose to emphasize Aditya's loneliness and his uncertainty about which direction to take. These visual elements effectively conveyed his emotional state without relying on dialogue or written words.

Can the panel sequence be read in order without explanation?	We felt that the sequence should remain understandable even to someone who was unfamiliar with the original text. Therefore, we decided to use clear panel placement and an organized progression of locations, moving from the office to the outside environment. Each action needed to follow a logical sequence: Aditya approaches or stands at the director's desk, submits his resignation letter, returns to collect his photograph, leaves the building, and finally stands outside in the rain. We agreed that abrupt changes in location without a clear connection should be avoided, as they could confuse the viewer. Thus, the arrangement and placement of elements within each panel were considered just as important as the drawings themselves.
Does the sequence communicate the emotional arc without any text?	We concluded that an emotional journey can be shown by establishing an appropriate setting and employing body language, spatial composition, and the surrounding atmosphere. The first part of the story begins in a somber and calm vibe, and the act of leaving the photo and walking away further intensifies the feeling of finality. In the end part, the rain and Aditya's solitude enhance his sense of being alone and lost. We also spoke about the importance of Aditya's indecision when it comes to the choice he has to make, since it clarifies the point that the ending is not just about exiting the office, but also about making a decision concerning the following steps. In sum, we agreed that the emotions in this sequence should evolve from being calm and resolute to being detached and finally confused, without using any captions or speech.

Individual Contributions Noted

Member Name	Notable point they raised or contributed (one line)
Brundavan Ram Manohar	The team identified the resignation letter and the photograph as the two key elements of the plot. The letter represents Aditya's decision to leave, while the photograph highlights his personal and emotional connection to the workplace.
Melvin John	Suggested that the image could symbolize Aditya's memories and emotional connection to the office, while the act of picking it up could further emphasize the emotional significance of his departure.
Yedlapalli Jayendra Pallav	Emphasized the importance of maintaining a clear visual flow from the office to the outside so that the sequence remains understandable and the viewer can follow the events without needing to read the accompanying text.
Rudr Mansukhani	Highlighted that the final frame, showing Aditya standing in the rain and contemplating which direction to take, could be the strongest emotional moment. It effectively conveys his confusion and uncertainty about what lies ahead after leaving the workplace.

--	---

What We Did Not Get To / Open Questions

How a certain art style could influence the emotions conveyed by the comic and establish the overall tone of the message.

Anything Faculty Should Be Aware Of (optional)

NIL

Signatures

Story Anchor — Signature	Date	TA Countersignature	Date / Time Received
	27 th August, 2026

Note on evidentiary status: Team meetings are self-scheduled and are not attended by faculty or TAs. The TA countersignature confirms only that this report was received in the form presented, on the date and time shown — it does not verify the accuracy of its contents. Separately, the TA checks this report against the Weekly Discussion Guide for the corresponding week and logs completeness — and anything the team appears to have missed — in the TA Weekly Tabulation Log.

This report is a process-assurance record, confirming that structured story-development discussion is taking place on schedule. It does not substitute for Workbook Roughs, the Division of Labour documentation, or the End-Term Presentation as primary evidence for the Production Contribution criterion.